Known as “The Millennial Speaker”, Clint Pulver works with organizations that want to retain, engage and inspire the younger generation. As one of the most sought after Keynote speakers, Clint travels the world every year helping educators to remember the power and significance of the teaching job and that how they choose or choose not to teach in the classroom changes lives.

He has appeared on America’s Got Talent and in several different Feature Films with actors like Jack Black (School of Rock) and John Heder (Napoleon Dynamite). Clint was named one of Business Q Magazine’s “Top 40 Under 40” for his work in helping educators elevate their “WHY” of mentorship in the classroom and how connected and engaged educators yield loyal and long-term retention within the teaching job.

For over a decade, Clint has dedicated his heart to helping schools and administration understand the younger generation while helping the younger generation to understand themselves. Through his experience in the classroom, Clint demonstrates that to improve the quality of teaching we must be willing to improve the quality of the teaching job. With a blend of humor, unforgettable stories, and actionable takeaways that stick, Clint proves first-hand to educators and administration that a single moment in time can truly change a child’s life.
